

In the Country of Empty Crosses: The Story of a Hispano Protestant Family in Catholic New Mexico, Arturo Madrid

2013 Conference Book Author

Dr. Arturo Madrid is the Norine R. and T. Frank Murchison Distinguished Professor of the Humanities at Trinity University and the recipient of the Charles Frankel Prize in the Humanities in 1996, awarded by the National Endowment of the Humanities. Prior to joining the faculty of Trinity University in 1993, Madrid served as the founding president of the Tomás Rivera Center, the nation's first institute for policy studies on Latino issues, a position he held from 1984 to 1993. In addition to having held academic and administrative appointments at Dartmouth College, The University of California, San Diego, and the University of Minnesota, he has also served as Director of the Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FIPSE) and the Minority Institutions Science Improvement Program (MISIP) in the U.S. Department of Education as well as National Director of the Ford Foundation's Graduate Fellowship Program for Mexican Americans, Native Americans and Puerto Ricans.

Dr. Madrid has served on various national commissions as well as on the boards of some of the nation's most prominent educational organizations. The former include the National Council on Science and Technology Education of The American Association for the Advancement of Science (1985-1990); the Commission on Pre-College Education in Science, Mathematics and Technology of National Science Board (1982-1983); and U.S. Secretary of Education's National Commission on the Future of Higher Education (2005 -2006). The latter include The College Board, The Association for the Advancement of Higher Education, The Council for Basic Education, The National Center for Education and the Economy, The Center for Early Adolescence, The National Board for Professional Teaching Standards, The Intercultural Development Research Association, the Higher Education Research Advisory Committee of the Lumina Foundation for Education, The National Center for Public Policy and Higher Education, the Visiting Committee of the Harvard Graduate School of Education. and the National Civic League. He was an elected fellow of the Council on Foreign Relations, the nation's premier foreign policy association, and of the National Academy for Public Administration, which honors persons with a distinguished record in public administration. Currently Madrid serves as a member of the board of directors of Arte Público Press and the Guadalupe Cultural Arts Center (San Antonio).

A native of New Mexico and a graduate of the University of New Mexico (1960), Dr. Madrid holds a Ph.D. degree in Hispanic Languages and Literatures from UCLA as well as honorary doctorates from New England College, The California State University at Hayward, Mt. Holyoke College, Pomona College, and Texas Lutheran University. He was awarded The President's Medal by Brooklyn College in 1997 and was recently (2009) honored with the John Hope Franklin Award by Diverse: Issues in Higher Education. He is the author of multiple reports and essays on education and culture as well as of a family memoir, In the Country of Empty Crosses, Trinity University Press, 2012.